Program Description

Georgetown's English Department and the Office of International Programs offer a Shakespeare in performance program to be held in London and Stratford-upon-Avon. It may be taken for graduate or undergraduate credit. The program begins with one week in London where students will focus on Shakespeare's theatre, past and present. They will visit Shakespeare's Globe, the replica of the open air stage where many of Shakespeare's plays were first produced, and the Middle Temple Hall, the indoor space where Twelfth Night was performed by Shakespeare's company in 1602. Participants will attend three performances in London (at least one of which will be staged at The Globe) and take part in lectures and discussions of the plays they attend. Students will also have an opportunity to explore Shakespeare's London as a group.

The class in London will meet in the morning to discuss the plays in performance and attend the performances (depending on the schedules of the theatres) in the afternoon or evening. Friday afternoon and Saturday of the first week will be free for individual activities in London.

The second week of the course will be held in Stratford-upon-Avon, the town where Shakespeare was born, and it will feature a production of Shakespeare's plays by the Royal Shakespeare Company. In Stratford, students will attend the theater of the Royal Shakespeare Company and classes on the plays at the Shakespeare Center (next to Shakespeare's birthplace). The classes in Stratford will be taught by Shakespeare scholars from Georgetown and the Shakespeare Center and members of The Royal Shakespeare Company involved in the productions. Participants will also explore Stratford and visit the Shakespeare houses in and around Stratford.

Academics

Upon successful completion of the program, students will earn a total of three Georgetown credits (graduate or undergraduate) for the following course:

ENGL-129-62: Shakespeare: Text and Performance (undergraduate)

ENGL-129-63: Shakespeare: Text and Performance (graduate)

Withdrawals, Refunds, and Cancellation

Your acceptance form and program deposit are considered a good-faith commitment to participate on your Georgetown University summer program. Withdrawal from a summer program must be made in writing to the summer program coordinator. Please note that application fees and program deposits are non-refundable. Georgetown University will refund recoverable tuition and costs as determined by our partner institutions. Refunds will be calculated from the date the Office of International Programs is notified in writing of your intent to withdraw. Georgetown University is not responsible for indirect costs paid directly by the student, including but not limited to passport fees, vaccinations, and transportation costs.

Georgetown University reserves the right to adjust program fees or cancel any program without prior notification; however, every effort will be made to provide information on cancellations in a timely manner. In the event of cancellation, Georgetown University will refund program deposits and 100% of recoverable program fees.
